Dr Kevin Palmer, Deputy Director, Pedagogy, Leadership and Professional Learning Division, Welsh Government
- 9.20 - 9.30 'Developing a national toolkit for self-evaluation for improvement'
Richard Lloyd, Lead Inspector, Estyn
- 9.30 - 9.50 Questions and comments from the floor
- 9.50 - 10.45 Preparing the workforce for the new curriculum: clarity, sharing best practice and peer-to-peer learning
What progress is being made by teachers in preparing for the change to the curriculum; is it on track? What is needed from the Welsh Government, local authorities, schools and teachers to support the process of implementing the curriculum? Is there still confusion about roles and responsibilities, and how can authorities communicate more clearly to ensure this does not persist? Will the National Approach to Professional Learning be sufficient to prepare teachers in time for the new curriculum? What does it mean for a school to be a 'learning organisation' and how can schools be supported in shifting their culture to self-evaluation? How can peer-to-peer learning be embedded and encouraged inside and outside of the classroom? What should be the next steps for ensuring lessons learnt by the pioneer schools are shared more widely? How can time be made for professional reflection for teachers and what will be rolled back to allow this time? What is needed for the use of relevant technologies to be promoted and embedded in the curriculum, and how can the digital competency of learners be improved?

- 11.55 - 12.45 The future for the teaching workforce and perspectives on the workforce development plan: recruitment, small and rural schools, and Welsh language provision
What should be the priorities for implementing the workforce development plan? What does the '2022 teacher' look like and what steps can be taken to ensure teachers have key skills around leadership, self-improvement, tailoring learning for individual student needs, and with regard to mental health and additional learning needs? What will be needed from the plan to support small, rural schools and Welsh language provision? What can be learnt from the review into teachers' pay and conditions, including how the new devolved powers can be used most effectively to improve recruitment and retainment? What are the implications of barriers to entry identified by the Teacher Retention and Attractiveness in Wales report, and what steps can be taken to address them? How can working as a teacher in Wales be made more attractive, particularly in comparison to other parts of the UK?
